Aspiring Authors

Kids, parents and educators all give Aspiring Authors an "A" for Awesome.

If you're in grades K-8, Aspiring Authors will help you create your very own book. Have your teacher register your class on Lulu and start writing your original story. Each student that completes a book will receive their first printed copy for free.

The story, for young authors.

Once upon a time, Lulu developed a publishing program that gave kids a whole new way to let their imaginations run wild.

And in no time at all, a group of elementary school students found themselves with a pretty amazing opportunity: the chance to become published authors.

Given this chance, a little girl named Sydney just started writing and writing and writing, and ended up creating a book called "Be Mine." And the next thing she knew, she had her very own printed copy of her very own story delivered right to her - free of charge. Just like all the other kids in her class.

That's how Aspiring Authors - a youth publishing program designed to encourage creativity and literacy in kids - was born.

Kid Publishing

Lulu has attracted gazillions of young authors and artists - like 10-year-old award winner McKenna Andrews - creating and selling awesome books, calendars, art and

Lulu is a Self-Publishing website that allows individuals and classrooms to create and publish for free. You can create free content that others can download or you can create content (including music, art, poetry, eBooks etc.) that people from around the world could purchase. Schools could use this as a fundraiser by publishing student work and creating books, calendars, music, art work etc. that parents, relatives and the world could purchase. Easy to use and fun. The site below is a link to the Aspiring Authors Site. Registered students can publish and receive the first copy of their book in print. Check it out!
